

Some examples of wikis

Need inspiration? Here are some wiki examples ...

Some examples

Here are a couple of examples of how you might use the wiki to present information:

- A departmental intranet
- A committee or project wiki

Space directory

Have a browse through the Space directory (click on Spaces above) to see more examples of wikis at York. Try:

- Digital Marketing and Communications - an example of support pages for a specific subject area, containing guides and other resources. Note the use of labels to produce an A-Z of categories.
- DCO Forum - an example of a wiki for a group or committee.
- Enterprise Projects Team - an example of an outward-facing team wiki (visible to all, not just restricted to the team), providing details of the work of the team, team members, and documents that can be downloaded.
- Research Computing Training and Support - another example of support pages. This one contains a blog.

Please send any comments about this page to Lorraine Moor, Information Services, lorraine.moor@york.ac.uk.